About this report

Emotional Intelligence (EI) is a combination of attitudes and behaviours that distinguish outstanding performance from average performance. Individuals with higher EI will be better able to manage themselves and their relationships to be both personally and interpersonally effective.

This Interview guide is derived from the candidate’s responses to the Emotional Intelligence Profile questionnaire (EIP). The report is based on the candidate’s self-perception and how this compares to a comparison group (shown on the front cover). It describes the candidate’s potential for demonstrating key emotional and social competencies, which are important for work performance.

Interview questions are provided for each competency, which can be used to collect behavioural evidence to verify the candidate’s scores.

Guidelines for using this report

- Treat the information in this report as confidential. It should only be viewed by approved individuals. Please ensure that it is stored and disposed of in line with your company policy.

- The ‘competency potential’ scores provided in this report are intended to support the interview process. They are not intended for sifting or initial screening of candidates without an interview.

- The data from this report should not be used in isolation but combined with information collected from other assessment methods to inform the assessment decision.

- Note that Emotional Intelligence can be developed. During the interview, consider whether the candidate demonstrates development potential in relation to the areas being assessed. Are they aware of their development areas? Do they provide evidence that they are trying to address these?

- Discuss with the candidate how they were feeling when they completed the questionnaire; their state or situation at the time of completion may have affected how they responded to the questions.

- The data collected in this report has a usual shelf life of a few months. However, it is recommended that interviews take place soon after the candidate completes the questionnaire.

Please note: due to the electronic generation of the report, PSI Services cannot guarantee this guide has not been changed or edited. We do not accept liability for consequences of the use of this guide.
The interview process

BEFORE
- Review the job specification and candidate information that has already been collected
- Confirm which of the Emotional Intelligence competencies are important for successful performance in the job
- Review the candidate’s potential in relation to these competencies and questions to explore them

DURING
- Use the interview questions to explore the candidate’s capability and potential for the competencies
- Determine if the candidate’s responses reflect their potential score and probe further if required
- Make notes in the space provided to record key evidence from the candidate’s responses

AFTER
- Evaluate your notes alongside the candidate’s competency potential and decide on a final rating for each competency
- Record summary points from the interview regarding candidate strengths and risks or development areas
- Record final recommendations (if required) and provide candidate feedback (if needed)*

* The Candidate feedback report is available to download alongside this report.

Candidate response style

The following key points were identified through looking into the candidate's general response style when completing the EIP questionnaire:

- The candidate’s general response style in completing the EIP questionnaire was typical of others. There are no specific points about their response style to be aware of when reviewing their results.
Emotional Intelligence competencies

Emotional Intelligence (EI) influences successful performance for a range of competencies. A selection of ten key EI-related competencies are described below. These are grouped into two areas: Personal Effectiveness and Interpersonal Effectiveness. Tick ☑️ which of these competencies are desirable or essential for the job role - these should be your priorities to explore in the interview process.
